BALTIMORE BOY, HELD AS SPY, IS RELEASED

Youth Named O'Connor Enlisted In Canadian Regiment as Muller and Was Arrested.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 21.—One Baltithe allies as a member of a Canadian regiment failed to meet heroic death on the firing line, or even to get to the front. But he is safely back in the United States after being saved from a spy's fate through efforts of Congressman J. F. C. Talbott and others.

He is Daniel O'Connor, who has been somewhat of a soldier of fortune since he was sixteen years old, when he left home to make his own way in an adventurous world. As yet he is not twenty-one years old and has seen far the larger part of the United States, besides the inside of an English military prison.

His brother, Joseph A. O'Conner, told what he knew of Daniel's spy experience. He has visited his home here but once since his departure five years ago.

Name Led Him Into Trouble. Sometime ago he wrote that he had enlisted in a Canadian regiment and was going to the front.

But the thing he did not tell was that he enlisted under the name of Muller. Though his mother is of Ger man descent, his family is at a loss to understand why he assumed the honest old Teutonic name under which to enlist in an English regi-ment, except out of dare-deviltry. This was not learned until the famfly got a letter from him, stating that he was in a military prison in Liver-pool under suspicion of being a spy. Exactly how it happened the family does not yet know, but it is practi cally certain that the German flavor of his assumed name started an investigation, resulting in the discov ery that his real name was O'Connor The German and Irish combination was a little too much for the matter-of-fact English military mind—especially after the Irish rebellion.

O'Connor showed in his letter that the danger of his being "led up against the wall" was very imminant.

"Marse Fred" to Rescue Then the family got busy, gathered evidence as was necessary to rove his American citizenship and enlisted the aid of "Marse Fred" Talbott. The data was examined by members of the State Department and it was discovered that Daniel

Full investigation of his conduct while in the service failed to confirm the "spy" suspicion, so he was released and allowed to come back to the United States.

According to the last letter from him, he is in New York, inclined to settle down to the calm life of this at present prosperous and peaceful country.
